IRS lien shows Floyd Mayweather owes $22.2M on 2015 taxes

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The IRS says it's still waiting for its cut from Floyd Mayweather Jr. from his nine-figure payday against Manny Pacquiao.

The undefeated boxer nicknamed "Money" owes $22.2 million in taxes from 2015, according to a notice of a federal tax lien filed by the IRS.

The notice shows the balance unpaid as of March 6. The lien was filed with county officials in Las Vegas in April, and the boxing champ last week filed for a temporary reprieve with the U.S. Tax Court.

Still, the boxer who regularly flaunts his wealth defended himself on Facebook on Monday, saying his "empire is rock solid" and the IRS "just wants to be part of the 'Money May' show."

"While everyone is counting my money and assuming the worst, these are the facts... Uncle Sam, received $26,000,000.00 from me in 2015! What else could they possibly want?" he wrote in a post with a picture of a handwritten ledger that showed three amounts totaling $26 million. "I'm sure I would have been notified much sooner if there were any real discrepancies right?"

Mayweather's tax troubles come as he prepares for a boxing match against Irish MMA star Conor McGregor in August in Las Vegas. Mayweather, 49-0, will be ending his retirement to face McGregor at T-Mobile Arena. Depending on pay-per-view sales, both fighters could earn huge purses, though probably not the $200 million or so Mayweather earned for the fight against Manny Pacquiao.

The men on Tuesday appeared at a news conference in Los Angeles to promote the fight, the first of four this week. There's been plenty of trash talk around the fight, and McGregor didn't miss the opportunity to attack Mayweather.

"The reason he has accepted this fight to come out of retirement is because he has to," McGregor said. "He's in a dire situation. That is not a good situation to be in."

Mayweather told reporters he "already took care" of his taxes.

"I ain't worried about that. I just showed you all a $100 million check I didn't even cash onstage," he said, referring to a check from his fight against Pacquiao. "So we ain't tripping on that."

His tax attorney did not immediately return a request seeking comment. It's unclear whether the IRS has tried to withhold on Mayweather's purse from the fight against McGregor. The agency does not comment on individual cases. Nevada boxing regulators did not immediately return a request for comment.

Generally, the IRS freezes any collection activity as soon as a taxpayer contests a lien. Mayweather petitioned the D.C.-based U.S. Tax Court on July 5 to hear his case in Las Vegas.

The petition process comes after a taxpayer and an IRS officer fail to reach an agreement over how a tax debt can be satisfied, said attorney Leighton Koehler, who is with the Las Vegas office of the Dickinson Wright firm and is not associated with the boxer's case. The appeals process may be buying Mayweather time to collect his millions from the August fight and presumably use the money to pay the IRS. Koehler, who previously worked as an IRS senior revenue agent, said that tax judges only travel to Las Vegas once or twice a year, forcing taxpayers to wait six months to a year before their case is heard.

Manfred: MLB open to more aggressively managing change

MIAMI (AP) — With home runs, strikeouts and game times at record levels, Commissioner Rob Manfred says baseball is open to making changes in the sport's rules.

Major League Baseball proposed several initiatives last offseason, including a 20-second pitch clock, a limit of one mound trip by a catcher per pitcher each inning and raising the bottom of the strike zone slightly to its pre-1996 level. The only change the union agreed to was to allow intentional walks to be signaled without throwing pitches.

"There have been dramatic changes in the game, the way the game's taught, the way the game is played at the big league level," Manfred said Tuesday during a meeting with the Baseball Writers' Association of America. "There is a dramatically increased tolerance for strikeouts by offensive players. There's much, much more emphasis on the home run as the principal offensive tool in the game. There's a dramatic increase in the use of relief pitchers, even to the point of kind of a rotating bottom of the roster between Triple-A and who's in the big leagues."

The percentage of plate appearances resulting in home runs peaked at 2.99 percent in 2000, the height of the Steroids Era, according to data compiled by the commissioner's office. After sinking to 2.28 percent in 2014, it rose to 2.67 percent the following year, 3.04 percent last season and 3.30 percent this year.

The percentage of plate appearances resulting in strikeouts has increased for 12 consecutive years, from 16.4 percent in 1999 to 21.6 percent this season.

"Fans like home runs, it seems, and fans like strikeouts, it seems, and we have a lot of both," players' association head Tony Clark said.

Manfred agreed, but only if the strikeouts are by a dominant pitcher, such as a Clayton Kershaw.

"I think where it gets troubling from a fan perspective is tons and tons of strikeouts, no action, lots of pitching changes," Manfred said.

The average ratio of relief pitchers to starters per game has climbed from 2.01 in 1990 to 3.15 last season. It stands at 3.10 this year at the All-Star break but rises each season after active rosters expand from 25 to 40 on Sept. 1.

"Other sports have been more aggressive about managing what's going on in the field in terms of what their game looks like than we have been, and I'm certainly open to the idea that we should take a more aggressive posture," Manfred said.

MLB is concerned about the increasing length of games. Nine-inning games have averaged 3 hours, 5 minutes this season, up from an even 3 hours last year and 2:56 in 2015.

"We are having dialogue with Major League Baseball and we will continue to have dialogue with Major League Baseball," Clark said. "We expect those conversations to pick up here in the second half of the season."

MLB has the right to impose for 2018 the proposals made last offseason that were not accepted. That, however, would be a last resort.

"I would much rather have agreement than proceed unilaterally," Manfred said. "That is particularly true when it comes to changes that affect the play of the game on the field because only the players are in between those lines, not any of us."

Manfred said it hired an expert to audit the people who have tested baseballs and found no irregularities, but said MLB is considering stricter specifications for the manufacturing process.

Registration closes this week for summer tennis program

by Blue Chen-Fruean
Samoa News Correspondent

Looking for something to keep the kids busy this summer? Take them to the Lions Park tennis courts in Tafuna where they can join the close to 60 youngsters who are currently enrolled in the 2017 summer tennis program, already in full swing.

The program is an annual offering for the territory’s aspiring athletes, sanctioned by the American Samoa Tennis Association (ASTA).

Registration closes this week and costs $10 per child, to be paid at the tennis court.

The six-week program includes kids as young as 3 years old, all the way to high school age.

Beginners are taught the basics - learning how to use hand-eye coordination to connect the racket with the ball, and how to properly stroke a forehand, backhand, and volley.

Intermediate players, or those who have already mastered the basics, are also part of this year’s program, honing their skills.

Three coaches, all of whom are former members of Team

American Samoa, are at the tennis courts everyday to conduct the lessons.

They are: Matthew Dither Barja, Clarence Herdrich, and Jummah Vigas. All three young men are spending their summer months building up young people who want to make tennis a part of their lives, just like they did.

The program is broken down into two sessions: 9a.m. - 11a.m. and 12noon to 2 p.m.

“The morning session is not so crowded because some of our kids are attending summer school and are a part of the Boys and Girls Club,” Barja told Samoa News yesterday morning. He said the afternoon session is busier and kids who want to participate in both sessions are welcomed to do so.

All rackets and balls are provided by the ASTA and parents are strongly urged to pack a lunch and “lots of water” for their child.

The summer tennis program is held Monday through Friday from now until July 28th.

Interested parents are invited to stop by the Lions Park tennis courts in Tafuna for more information.

Miller forming Indiana schedule after Big Ten decision

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Archie Miller’s trickiest summer job might be piecing together Indiana’s schedule. Inheriting only a few locked-in matchups for next season, the Big Ten’s decision to play two conference games in early December, the conference tournament coming a week before Selection Sunday and the possibility of playing 20 conference games in future years have all complicated matters for the Hoosiers’ new coach.

“When you look at the non-conference schedule and two Big Ten games coming the first weekend of December, it’s going to be very, very taxing getting through November and December,” Miller said Tuesday before one of the team’s summer workouts. “I think when it’s done it will be a tough non-conference schedule for us. Will it be glamorous? I don’t think so. I’m not sure we can do glamorous right now.”

Miller takes over a team that lost its opening NIT game and then lost three of its top four scorers — two of them underclassmen who were NBA draft picks. Only three players on Indiana’s roster started 20 or more games last season, and the new schedule doesn’t give the Hoosiers the usual two-month initiation period to get acclimated. Indiana already has booked two road trips — one to Seton Hall for the Gavitt Tipoff, the other to Louisville. There’s also a home game against Duke in the ACC-Big Ten Challenge and a neutral court game in the Crossroads Classic against Notre Dame. Indiana fans are still clamoring for future games against Kentucky, and Miller has discussed the possibility of facing his brother, Arizona coach Sean Miller, sometime down the road.

But that may become more difficult now that the Big Ten has decided to play two conference games in three days on the first weekend of December. “It hurts you in the ability to schedule non-conference games,” Miller said. “But I think it will add a lot of excitement to it. I think you’ll have some games in early December that will add some importance, and I think it will be showcase basketball for our conference.”

The other end of the schedule is equally challenging. With the Big Ten Tournament heading to Madison Square Garden in March, the championship game will no longer be the final big game of selection weekend. Instead, it will be played one week before the NCAA Tournament pairings are announced, forcing Miller and other Big Ten coaches to reassess how to handle a week-long break.

“I think there’s been a lot of things thrown out, like do you save an exhibition game or a non-conference game for that week,” Miller said. “But there’s so much at risk. The Missouri Valley Conference has done it for a while and Wichita State has used that week to just sort of sharpen yourself up, and I think we’ll try to use it that way.”

The Shockers used that extra week to start preparing for Miller’s Dayton Flyers last spring. Wichita State won the game and eight days later, Miller accepted the Indiana job. Miller doesn’t have a timeline for when the team’s schedule will be released. “Inheriting sort of a blank slate and trying to build has taken some time,” he said. “We’re coming down the home stretch here.”

Notes: Forward Collin Hartman has been cleared for contact after missing all of last season with an injured left knee. Miller said the Hoosiers will not rush Hartman back and that “mentally, physically, he feels better than he has in a long, long time.” ... Indiana has named Brian Walsh the director of basketball operations. Walsh spent the last three seasons with Miller at Dayton. Walsh played at Xavier and Akron and led the Mid-American Conference in 3-point percentage (43.4) as a junior.

Mayweather-McGregor promo tour gets off to frenzied start

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Floyd Mayweather Jr. reached into a backpack and held out a $100 million check for the crowd of 11,000 fight fans to see.

“Let me show you what a $100 million fighter looks like,” he said.

Conor McGregor interrupted from his stool behind the podium: “That’s to the tax man.” Mayweather replied: “You’re right. I’m the IRS, and I’m going to tax your ass.”

The undefeated boxer and the Irish UFC champion have thrown their first jabs in a summer of verbal sparring before the fighting spectacle of the year.

Mayweather and McGregor kicked off a four-city promotional tour Tuesday at Staples Center, facing off in front of a raucous crowd that thoroughly enjoyed this circus’ first stop in Hollywood.

Both fighters promised a knockout, and they had a prolonged shouting match during their second faceoff, with UFC President Dana White stepping between them.

“I am fighting, and he is boxing,” McGregor said.

“It’s two men at the top of their game competing. It’s two worlds colliding. That enough is reason why this is what it is.”

All but the most naive fight fans realize the promotion for this bout could be much more entertaining than the historic 154-pound fight Aug. 26 in Las Vegas.

McGregor and Mayweather traded clever insults and profane boasts that quickly showed why this boxing match should be a rare spectacle — before the opening bell, anyway.

“He looks good for a seven- or eight-figure fighter, but I’m a nine-figure fighter,” Mayweather said.

“This (guy) made 3 million dollars his last fight, but we know that’s training camp money for me.”

The 40-year-old Mayweather has been coaxed out of his latest retirement for the colossal payday coming from this unique matchup.

The bout will cost $99.95 on high-definition pay-per-view, while tickets at T-Mobile Arena will range from $500 to $10,000 — and there aren’t many $500 seats.

In a tailor-made pinstripe suit that repeated a profane phrase in tiny letters as its stripe, McGregor didn’t try to disguise his glee at the prospect of his mammoth financial reward for seeing how his heavy hands can fare against Mayweather’s famed defensive skills in this cross-disciplinary experiment.

McGregor got more personal than Mayweather, going after everything from the boxer’s apparent money troubles to his attire.

McGregor also risked racial offensiveness when he yelled, “Dance for me, boy! Dance for me, son!” during an exchange with Mayweather.

“He’s in a ... track suit,” McGregor said, looking at Mayweather. “He can’t even afford a suit anymore. The Rolls is a 2012 outside. He is (expletive). There’s no other way about it. I’m going to knock him out inside of four rounds, mark my words.”

Two years after his last fight and several years after his trash-talking heyday, Mayweather rose to the promotional challenge in an energetic, biting performance.

The unbeaten star led his fans in a call-and-response cheer that derided McGregor as “easy work!”

“That’s what the people want to see,” Mayweather said. “To have a sold-out arena and just give these people something just real smooth and calm, they don’t want that.

That’s not what they want. These fans want entertainment, and that’s what we’re here to give them.”

And while the 40-year-old Mayweather acknowledged his skills have declined and claimed his comeback is for one fight only, he also said he has “more than enough” to beat a rookie boxer.

“We know Mr. Tapout likes to quit,” Mayweather said, referring to McGregor’s submission loss to Nate Diaz in UFC competition last year.

When McGregor spoke to the media after the public show, Floyd Mayweather Sr. relentlessly heckled him from the back of the room.

The 64-year-old trainer’s presence provoked genuine amusement from the two-division mixed martial arts champion, who suggested he might not abide by the contract that would punish him for MMA tactics with an enormous financial penalty.

“Tell him as long as he speaks my name with respect, I will abide by the boxing rules,” McGregor said to Mayweather Sr.

“I’ll abide by the Marquess of Queensberry Rules only if he speaks my name. If he disrespects me during this buildup, then maybe I might just bounce an elbow off his eyebrow. So that’s on him how he does it.”

The team from Afono came out in full force earlier this month during cricket games hosted by the CCCAS Pulega - Sua, which comprises churches from the east side villages. Next item up on the agenda for the summer: soccer.

Manfred willing to wait on new ballparks for A's and Rays

MIAMI (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Rob Manfred is willing to wait — to a point — for the Tampa Bay Rays and Oakland Athletics to get new ballparks.

Tampa Bay and Oakland are the only two major league teams currently seeking new stadiums. The Rays have a lease through 2027 at Tropicana Field, which opened in 1990 and has hosted the Rays since the team started play in 1998.

The A's have been at the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum since moving there from Kansas City for the 1968 season. The park opened in 1966.

“We right or wrongly have been extraordinarily committed to our existing markets and patient with those markets as a result,” Manfred told the Baseball Writers’ Association of America on Tuesday. “I continue to believe that Tampa is a viable major league market. I also believe it may be better than the alternatives that we have out there, and I am hopeful that we get to a resolution. As I’ve said to you before, however, there does come a point in time where we have to accept the reality that the market for whatever set of reasons can’t get to the point that they have a major league quality facility, and I am not going to indefinitely leave a club in a market without a major league quality facility.”

The Rays have been considering sites on both the St. Petersburg and Tampa sides of the bay.

“It really depends on progress, right?” Manfred said. “At the point in time that it starts to grind to a halt and nothing’s happening — I don’t think we’re there, OK — but at that point in time where everybody’s kind of, you get this look of where are we going next, that’s when you’ve got to start thinking about what your alternatives are.”

The San Francisco Chronicle reported last month the A’s are focusing on three locations. The paper said the team is strongly interested in a 13-acre site near downtown that currently is headquarters of the Peralta Community College District. The Chronicle also said Oakland Mayor Libby Schaaf favors Howard Terminal, north of Jack London Square, and the team is considering constructing a new ballpark at its current location, the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum.

John Fisher was approved in November as the controlling owner of the Athletics.

“They’ve said they’re going to by the end of the year identify a site in Oakland that’s their preferred site,” Manfred said. “I think that given the change in the control situation in Oakland that it was prudent for Mr. Fisher to take a year and make a decision as to what site he thinks is the best. That decision is a uniquely local decision. I really don’t believe it is my job to have a preference for those sites. They know their market better.”

Manfred said at a Town Hall on Monday that MLB will delay any plans for expansion until after the A’s and Rays get new ballparks. He mentioned Montreal, Mexico City and Charlotte, North Carolina, as expansion candidates.

No fireworks in LA, as city appears likely Olympic winner

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There was no parade. No reports of delirious fans honking horns or dancing in the streets. No spontaneous flag-waving.

Los Angeles was all but guaranteed to be awarded a future Olympic Games on Tuesday, most likely in 2028, but the public reaction in the sports-crazed city was, well, subdued.

The privately run committee behind LA's Olympic bid has organized dozens of flashy, celebrity-studded events to showcase public support for making Los Angeles a three-time Olympic city, after hosting the 1932 and 1984 Games.

But there were no fireworks Tuesday after the International Olympic Committee, meeting in Switzerland, voted unanimously to seek a deal to award the 2024 and 2028 Games, one to each city. Paris is widely seen as the favorite for 2024, with Los Angeles getting the runner-up prize, 2028.

"Big step forward but more work to do," Jeff Millman, a spokesman for the group, said in an email after being asked about the absence of a public event to mark the occasion.

And the IOC won't make a final decision until September, he added.

But there appeared to be little doubt about the significance of the vote Tuesday.

"L.A. is a virtual lock to host 2024 or '28 Olympics," a headline on the Los Angeles Times website said.

"Los Angeles is in the game as America's team," Los Angeles City Council President Herb Wesson said in an email.

The city's bid committee has long argued that there is overwhelming public support for bringing the Games back to L.A. It has spent millions of dollars staging events to stoke Olympic excitement, and its long list of supporters includes Kobe Bryant, swimmer Janet Evans, Venus and Serena Williams and other sports royalty.

"We have such enthusiasm in our city," Garcetti said, speaking in Switzerland. "We are in love with the Olympics."

The deal to divide the spoils between the two cities would fulfil a strategy the IOC set in motion last year to help safeguard a stable future for the signature Olympic event. After years of runaway spending, the two bids are seen as financially secure.

A 2028 Olympics in Southern California would be the first American-hosted games since 1996 in Atlanta.

The understated response to Tuesday's decision is part of the long, strange journey for LA, which was once shunted aside after Boston was selected at the U.S. pick for the 2024 Games.

After being snubbed, LA was awarded the spot in September 2015, after Boston's bid soured amid flagging public support.

"I've been in a few political campaigns, but this has been a long one," Garcetti said.

LA organizers once said they were seeking only the 2024 Games. But they later signaled they would consider 2028 after it became clear the IOC wanted to make a dual award.

Garcetti sounded confident, speaking with the media. "L.A. is ready to throw these Olympics in two months, if we were asked, or two decades if it came to that," the mayor said.

All-Star players remember late Marlins ace Jose Fernandez

MIAMI (AP) — Clayton Kershaw stood in the National League clubhouse before Tuesday's All-Star Game across from Jose Fernandez's locker, which serves as memorial to the Miami Marlins' dynamic right-hander.

"It's sad for sure to see that," said Kershaw, the Los Angeles Dodgers' ace. "Obviously he meant a lot to everybody, because his locker is still here. You reflect for sure."

Fernandez was a two-time All-Star before he died at 24 in a boat crash last September.

Among his unfulfilled goals was to start in Tuesday's game at his home ballpark. It would have happened if not for the accident, Marlins owner Jeffrey Loria said.

"His last five starts would probably have been one-hitters, so he would have forced the issue," Loria said. "He is on my mind every day, every single day. It's something that doesn't disappear for me, unfortunately. No doubt he would have been an All-Star."

He would have found a way to be the starter."

Marlins slugger Giancarlo Stanton agreed. "His No. 1 thing to that point, besides winning Cy Young, was to start this game," Stanton said.

In tribute to Fernandez, NL All-Star right fielder Bryce Harper wore colorful shoes bearing the pitcher's image and uniform number 16.

Fernandez was the probable operator of the speeding boat that crashed into a jetty last Sept. 25, killing him and two other men, an investigation determined. It listed drugs and alcohol as factors in the crash.

Para athlete dies during practice session ahead of worlds

LONDON (AP) — The International Paralympic Committee says an athlete died Tuesday after being injured during a practice session in London, where the World Para Athletics Championships start this week.

The IPC gave no details of the cause of death of the 36-year-old Abdullah Hayayei, a thrower from the United Arab Emirates who was entered in the shot put, discus and javelin throw events in the F34 class.

In a statement, the IPC said "emergency services were called shortly after 17:00 to reports of a seriously injured man. At 17:20 the athlete was pronounced dead at the scene."

Police, London Ambulance Service and London's Air Ambulance attended the scene at the Newham Leisure Centre.

The IPC said the athlete's family in the UAE had been informed of his death.

Hayayei made his Paralympic debut at the Rio 2016 Paralympic Games, finishing sixth in the javelin and seventh in shot put in the F34, a category for seated throws for athletes with impairments typical of conditions such as cerebral palsy or traumatic brain injury.

"We are all truly devastated by this tragic news and the passing of Abdullah," IPC President Philip Craven said in a statement.

Youth members representing various churches within the Pulega - Sua of the Congregational Christian Church of American Samoa (CCCAS) will be spending their summer months engaged in sports activities aimed at not only promoting a healthy life-style, but fellowship amongst the young people.

The first sporting activity on the agenda was a cricket competition held on Saturday, July 1 and Tuesday, July 4 at the Faga'itua Cricket Field.

Team Masefau took home bragging rights, placing 1st overall, with Afono coming in second place, Faga'itua in third place, and Laulii in fourth place.

The games were attended by not only the youth and church members, but members of the clergy, including ministers, elders, deacons, and their wives.

The next planned sporting activity is a soccer league, set to start at the end of this month.

A venue is yet to be confirmed. The CCCAS Pulega Sua consists of churches from Afono, Laulii, Amaua, Faga'itua, Sailele, Masausi and Masefau. Not all of the churches entered cricket teams but nonetheless, each church was represented that day, with everyone coming out to enjoy the games and form friendships that will hopefully last a lifetime.

Those who participated in the cricket games collectively agree that activities such as these are useful in promoting good sportsmanship and helping to keep the youth occupied while school is out for summer break. They are all looking forward to the planned soccer league and whatever other games/activities the committee has in mind.

THE LAST WORD IN ASTROLOGY

Happy Birthday: Change can be good if you put your heart into accepting the inevitable and making the most of whatever transpires. Treat your body and mind with respect and stick to a healthy diet and exercise routine. Your numbers are 8, 14, 21, 24, 35, 39, 41.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What you do for others will help you overcome any shortcomings at home or in your personal life. Don't let anyone talk you into overspending or being excessive. Offer love and peace, not discord. ***

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Consider what others expect or want you to do, and make a decision to help or not based on time, money and desire. If you aren't fully motivated to do something, move on to an activity that suits you better **

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Forming an alliance is encouraged. Sharing information will give you leverage regarding the changes you want to see happen. Going with the flow will give you the ability to have greater control over the outcome. ****

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Some interesting opportunities will come your way. Take part in an event, retreat or conference that promotes something you have never experienced before. What you discover will change the way you live and how you treat the ones you love. ***

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A change in the way you handle your personal finances, contracts or health issues will bring satisfactory results. Generosity is a wonderful characteristic to have, but only to a point. You cannot buy love or respect. ***

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accept the inevitable and work with what you have. It's how you move forward that will make a difference to how far you get. Don't let disillusion take over. Get the facts and react with precision, detail and intelligence. ***

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Look at the big picture, but don't go overboard. Recognize any limitations or setbacks that challenge you and deal with them before you take on more. A complimentary attitude when dealing with others will help you get your way. ***

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't let love confuse you. Learn from past experiences and use your intuition to figure out how you can get your way without disturbing those you care about. Look for an alternative route that offers greater relationship stability. *****

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take care when making promises. If you cannot live up to what's expected of you, it will cause widespread problems both at home and at work. Talk is cheap if you don't follow through. Rethink your strategy before you commit. **

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Remembering the past will be helpful when trying to move forward. Dealing with emotional issues will be difficult if someone is not honest with you about their feelings or intentions. Open communication will be necessary. ***

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Self-indulgence based on false information should be recognized and dismissed. You'll gain far more if you stay focused on making a positive change at home. Act on facts, not on assumptions, if you want to avoid discord. ***

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Let your creative imagination take over. If you are unique in your approach, your novel ideas will attract positive attention. Don't fall short due to problems in your personal life. Deal with emotional situations abruptly. ***

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

GIRLS' MOM NEEDS JUMP START IN CONVERSATION ABOUT PUBERTY

DEAR ABBY: I'm a mother of three beautiful little girls. I'm nervous about having to talk with my oldest about puberty and sex. She's turning 10, and I know I need to start explaining certain things to her, but I have no idea how. My mother never sat me down and talked to me about anything, really, so my mom would not be of much help. Any advice you can offer would be greatly appreciated. -- MINNESOTA MOM OF THREE

DEAR MOM: You can spare your daughter a frightening experience when her first period arrives if you start talking to her now, before it happens. Start the conversation by making the message positive -- that she will "become a woman" soon and tell her what to expect. Show her what to do in case you are not there and what supplies she will need to take care of herself. That's step one.

A short time later, ask her what she knows about reproduction. Because reproduction is taught in some schools, she may surprise you by how much she already knows. If she doesn't, start talking to her about how her body works and your family values. It is important that parents also talk to their children about drugs and alcohol well before they start to experiment. My booklet "What Every Teen Should Know" covers sexuality as well as other topics, including dating, peer pressure, sexually transmitted diseases, drugs and alcohol. It can be ordered by sending your name and address, plus check or money order for $7 (U.S. funds) to Dear Abby Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. Shipping and handling are included in the price. Order it for yourself and review it before starting your discussions with your daughter. My Teen booklet has been distributed in doctors' offices as well as by educators and religious leaders. The more information you can provide your daughters, the better prepared those girls will be to make informed choices in the future.

DEAR ABBY: I've been with my girlfriend for seven years and, for the most part, our sex life is great. However, we've had disagreements when I suggested ways to spice it up.

I proposed costume/role play where she would dress up as an elf or other fantasy genre character. She hates the idea (and elves) and suggested lingerie (which I have bought for her in the past, but gets worn once or twice before being thrown away). I don't think my suggestion is outrageous compared to some of the letters I've seen in your column over the years. Am I wrong for thinking she's being closed-minded? -- COSPLAY CURIOUS IN CALGARY

DEAR "COS": It strikes me that your girlfriend may be more clothes-minded than closed-minded. It's a fact of life that some people are more sexually adventurous than others. Because she finds the idea of dressing as an elf unappealing, choose another fantasy figure you can agree upon.
